QUIZ NIGHT

this week

Quiz Night

I imagine by now you have all been actively preparing for our infamous Quiz Night! Up till the wee hours swotting tirelessly. Cramming the grey matter with endless facts!

I recently read in the October issue of New Scientist, that when we process information the brain makes and breaks connections. When we are actively learning, the making of new connections outweighs the breaking of old ones. But that's not all! The learning process carries on for life, it only seems to slowdown because we simply spend less time learning new stuff, and when we do we don't do it with the same potent mix of enthusiasm and attention as the average child!! There's hope for us all!

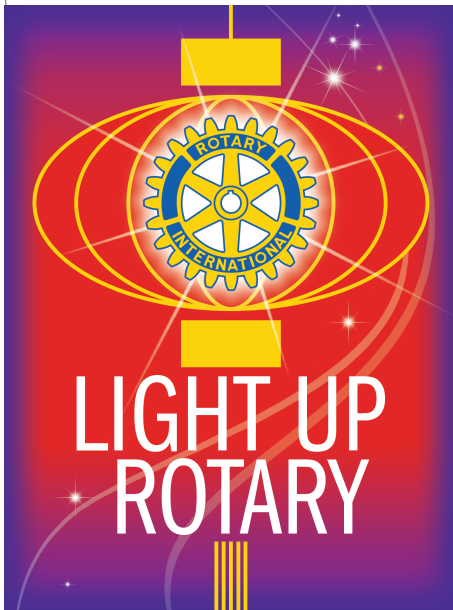

So, a couple of teasers to whet your appetite!

Which of their hits were Boney M banned from singing when they toured Russia?

Which way does an electric current flow in a battery - from positive to negative or from negative to positive?

What unusual term is used to describe the process of extracting poison from snakes?

All proceeds from this evening will go to the Eradication of Polio.

President’s roundup

On Thursday check out the new look double doors into the hall. Bob Pettigrew has completely replaced the door frame and rehung the doors with new hinges. It even looks like the doors have been repainted. The doors now only swing one way, and that is into the foyer. Well done Bob, a very professional and awesome job!! Thank you.

Mary is organising a Working Bee on Saturday 8th November at Rotary House. There will be heaps of jobs, painting, gardening and a general spring clean. So all hands on deck please, morning tea will be provided.
